Donor Spotlight: Terry Chauvin

Business Owner Gives to Equip the Mission

To provide safe water to communities around the world, our Living Water teams rely on a fleet of vehicles and the right drill rigs. Without this essential equipment, the work of bringing safe water to thirsty communities simply couldn't happen.

This is why we're thankful for people like Terry Chauvin who supports our Equip the Mission efforts, helping provide the equipment that powers this work every day. As a business owner, Terry understands the importance of having the right tools in place to get the job done.

"We are blessed to bless others, and I want to use whatever God gives me to serve others," Terry said.

When Terry first started his business, which specializes in inspecting water wells across the United States, he had a desire to give back to missions. He began researching different ministries, seeking to discern where God was calling him to give. After learning about Living Water's work, he decided to sign up for a Living Water trip—an experience he describes as life-changing.

Upon his return, Terry learned about the need to support Equip the Mission and made a commitment to support Living Water's work. Now, he not only gives monthly, but takes multiple trips a year, bringing other business owners from his C12 Christian Business group, hoping to inspire them to take that first step.

"I tell people God didn't part the water for the Israelites until they took the first step into the water," Terry said. "We don't have to know everything. We just need to listen to God's calling and take the first step. The rest is the journey."

Terry and his wife are grateful to help our field staff get the equipment they need to serve the thirsty.

Terry poses for a photo with students during one of his Living Water trips.